

The Building Civic Bridges Act (BCBA) Senators Chris Coons (D-Del.) and Todd Young (R-Ind.)

Background:

Polarization and division in the United States have reached such a point that it threatens our strength domestically and overseas. According to an NBC News poll conducted in January 2022, 70 percent of Americans agree with the statement that “America has become so polarized that it can no longer solve the major issues facing the country” – up from 45 percent in 2010.

However, this century has also seen significant growth in local innovations in civic bridgebuilding—a movement comprised of local leaders, nonprofits, businesses, and philanthropic partners making dedicated collective efforts to address polarization. Civic bridgebuilding can address toxic polarization at its source by facilitating the creation and maintenance of lasting person-to-person relationships across differences and emphasizing a common purpose. Federal support for efforts to reduce polarization and engage communities in civic bridgebuilding would support this work as a key national priority. In fact, a recent report from the Bipartisan Commission on the Practice of Democratic Citizenship points out that the U.S. government spends tens of millions of dollars through the National Endowment for Democracy trying to foster social cohesion and support civic bridgebuilding in other countries to strengthen democracy abroad — yet it does none of that work here in the United States.

Key features:

The bill would establish a non-partisan pilot program, led by an Office of Civic Bridgebuilding within AmeriCorps, focused on four core pillars:

- Administering a competitive grant program to support civic bridgebuilding programs across the nation, focused on supporting organizations and striving to address polarization in the United States;
- Supporting the training of AmeriCorps members in civic bridgebuilding skills and techniques;
- Supporting academic research on civic bridgebuilding, civic engagement, and social cohesion; and
- Activating a public conversation about the importance of civic bridgebuilding by directing AmeriCorps to serve as a convening and coordinating partner to the national civic bridgebuilding movement.

This bill will promote the ability of local communities to tackle sources of division while empowering participants and organizations with a foundation on which they can address contentious issues and ultimately, bridge divides.

Endorsing Organizations: America's Service Commissions; American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU); American Council on Education; American Leadership Forum of Silicon Valley; Association of American Universities (AAU); Association of Public and Land-grant Universities (APLU); Bates Technical College; Business for America; Business Roundtable; Campus Compact; Catholic Charities USA; Civic Health Project; Civility First; CoGenerate; Community 2.0; Constructive Dialogue Institute; Council for Christian Colleges and Universities; CSU Center for Public Deliberation; Divided We Fall; Fix Democracy First; Friends Committee on National Legislation; Future Caucus; Habitat for Humanity; Interfaith America; Lead for America; Listen First Project; More Perfect; Mormon Women for Ethical Government; Move for America; Multi-Faith Neighbors Network (MFNN) and Glocal Net; National Association of Counties (NACo); National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities (NAICU); National League of Cities; Nonprofit Association of Washington; Peace through Action USA; PEN America; Resolutionaries; Service Year Alliance; Shoulder to Shoulder; State Business Executives; State Higher Education Executive Officers Association (SHEEO); Tacoma Community College; Tacoma Urban League; Team Democracy; Third Way; U.S. Chamber of Commerce; University of Washington – Tacoma; Urban Rural Action; Voices for National Service; With Honor; YMCA of Pierce-Kitsap County; YMCA of the USA; YouthBuild; YVote/Next Generation Politics

For more information, please contact Katie Pannell (katie_pannell@coons.senate.gov) or Burke Miller (Burke_Miller@young.senate.gov)